Any student compelled to leave the University prior to the conclusion of a term must file an application for withdrawal, bearing the proper signatures, in their school/program. A withdrawal is not official until this is done. Refunds are based on percent of attendance. A student who withdraws during the term and does not file an application for withdrawal will receive marks of failure in all courses and will forfeit the right to any refund to which he/she would otherwise be entitled. All books must be returned to the library. If you are residing in campus housing, you must notify the proper official of your withdrawal from the University. Students must request permission to re-register in a subsequent term from their school/program. Students who received a student loan(s) through University of Maryland, Baltimore must receive an exit interview from Student Accounts, Administration Building. Refund schedules are available from the Office of Student Accounts.
